In localities where charcoal may be obtained at a cheap rate, this fertilizing agent offers besides the valuable advantage of giving porosity to stiff or marly soil. Being very greedy of moisture, it absorbs as much as 80 per cent. of water by rain, dew or fog, and keeps the ground in a state of salutary dampand keeps the ground in a state of salutary dampness, whilst a portion of its carbon is dissolved in it.

Its alow decomposition guards the most inexperienced farmer against the excess of its application, which is net limited by any proportion; for it does not impose its virtues to vegetation, but merely obeys the call, as required by natural wants. The unsteady state of health noticed of late in the growth of potatoes, has induced us to make a series of experiments in bringing that valuable tubercle in contact with charcoal.

We have chosen for that nurpose potatoes that were

We have chosen for that purpose polatoes that were idently attacked by the disease; and, instead of tting them into sets, we have taken small whole and which was previously manured with farm lung, and without any other preparation, we have imposited a handful of coarse powdered charcoal upon meb, before covering them with soil. The result was an abundant crop, entirely free from any trace of de-

In other trials we have mixed the charcoal in four different proportions with common garden soil, without addition of any other natritive principle; the effects produced were that the color of the stalks and the leaves was deep green, varying in shade with the quantity of charcoal employed, and exhibiting upon the whole that character of vigorous vegetation so evident when growth is stimulated by charcoal. We beg, however, to observe that we consider one-fourth of charged a given quantity of soil, the maximum that should be used, in order not to deprive this abercle of the other elements of its nutrition. Profixed to attain our object, which was chiefly to prevent the return of the former complaint of this fruit. Practice, in this circumstant is perfectly in har-namy with theory, for it shows the disease re-naves the carbon from the general that charcoal

We have also used charcoal for the preservation of otatoes stored in heaps, under roof or under ground. Their appearance a theing very healthy, we expected that such an application would insure their sound keep. For that purpose we have filled the interstices of the layers with powdered charcoal, to prevent, hereafter, a contagious contact between the tubercles. The charcoal took hold of the moisture escaping from efore their return to the soil; in this way, vegetables hat betrayed an unsatisfactory sanitary condition were protected for consumption or reproduction. The charcoal itself had lost none of its properties as a fer-ilizing power. We may add that we have introduced charcoal in many combinations of soil for the produc-tion of the chief plants of the great and the little culresponded to our expectations and confirmed our pre-visions, whether charcoal was employed as an auxil-iary of another manure, or whether as an isolated

For the potatoes, the result was nearly a double prop, free from any affection; for the cerealia, from one-third to one-half more in quantity; for artificial or natural grass, a considerable increase, evident by its thickness and hight. For all other vegetables, earlier development; more striking vigor, weight always superior to that of a produce obtained a disinfecting agent, when mixed up with the pure, solid and liquid refuse of animal economy; for that purpose it is necessary to separate by a riddle, the mpalpable powder from the coarse particles of the harcoal, so as to produce a granulation of the size of ago; the finer powder is then reserved for the cases above alluded to. This granulated substance has an immediate disinfecting property, when mixed with the most corrupted fecal matters, and a great power of absorption; by that double advantage it may be nsidered as the chespest and most efficacious means paralyze the insalubrious effects of the emanations from places where the evacuations of animal economy from places where the evacuations of animal economy are accumulated, in converting at the same time such substances into an inodorous body that may then be removed in the broad daylight without inconvenience to the surrounding atmosphere. In that state the ammoniacal gas which, otherwise, is for the greatest part lost before the excrements can reach the soil, is retained in the pores of the charcoal and vegetation obtains the whole hencest of the scote contained in the

To operate such a mixture, we have employed two arts of charcoal to one of human residum solid and iquid; such a proportion being sufficient to effectuate a smalgam dry enough to be conveyed in bags to ay place. In that state, whether the manure is ed to be forthwith confided to the soil, or stored to the attraction of the roots of the plants; it is a careful and judicious nurse that dispenses abundantly its food in favor of the plant that knows how to benefit by it, but obstinately refuses it to the atmosphere that would dissipate it. In that office performed by charcoal, the excrements are provided with the indispensable carbonic acid of which they are naturally void, a desideratum so much more valuable, that the affinity between the plant and the carbon is so powerful that one perceives the particles of charcoal within reach attached to the fibres of the roots; one he my that their slender extremities have the facaging that food all round for their con-

We believe that a compost of that nature in which the evacuations have not been previously spoiled by the abilition of mineral and vegetable substances, as is usually the case in dung pits, is, in every repect, equal in virtue to a good guano, and worth at east the double of a common or indifferent quality. Three vats or water tight casts provided with overs and sheltered against rain are the main appearance required for the operation; the first will consist the granulated characal; for which preparation plain hand mill, or even a large iron morear with we deven, will be all that is wanted; the fine sieve will separate the dust or impalpable powder, the will separate the dust or impalpable powder, the secure one will predice the grains required, retaining the larger lumps to be crushed again; the second container is destined to receive the excremental substance, and the third in which to perform the combination; a ladle and a large spatule or spaddle will complete the instruments of the plant for every house. The proporties of two parts of charcoal to one of had makes must, of course, by understood by the plants, any two ladlestale to one.

We realize that an establishment composed of six series produces yearly three tons of solid and liquid access produces yearly three tons of solid and liquid access, but we will release it to two term, maximum of charcoal required fair tone, total six tone, of risk makes wouth at land thirty dollars a ton, it is a fact, and in the plants above (32).

CAPT. ROBERT BROWN'S WHALING GUN, PATENT BOMB LANCES AND GUN HARPOONS. A FTER SEVERAL YEARS LABOR AND experimenting upon whales, on the whaling ground, with his apparatus, combined with the advantages of being a practical whaleman, the Patentee has been enabled to obtain an instrument in form of a Bomb Lance, which for utility and effectiveness exact be excelled.

ness cannot be excelled.

The attention of Agents and Officers of whale-ships is called to the following testimonials. San Francisco, January 10, 1856.

Capt. B. Brown—Sir. I take this opportunity to inform you that we used those Bomb Lances we bought of you, and found them to be of great nebell in capturing whales amongst found them to be of great negotit in capturing whales amongsthe ice.

The first whale that we need the Bomb Lance on was killed in the following manner.—The boat went alongside of the whale and the boat-steerer fired a Bomb into him and then fastened to him with a gig iron: the Bomb was heard to explode, and the whale did not blow after the Bomb exploded. The above-mentioned whale was in the ice, and it is our opinion that we should not have got that whale and many others that we did get, if it had not been for your Bomb Lances, and we fully recoramend them to the attention of those fitting out whale ships.

Respectfully yours.

Whaleships in the Pacific Ocean.

OFFICE OF THE PANAMA RAIL-ROAD COMPANY, NEW YORK, July 20, 1857.

The Panama Rail-Road Company takes this method of informing those interested in the Whaling business, of the advantages offered by the Railroad across the Isthmus of Panama, for the shipment of Oil from the Pacific to the United States, and for sending outfits and supplies from the United States, and for sending outfits and supplies from the United States to Panama.

The Bailroad has been in regular and successful operation for more than two years, and its capacity for the transportation of every description of merchandise, including Oil, Provisions, &c., has been fully tested. The attention of several Captains of whaleships has recently been turned to the subject of shipping their oil from Panama to New York during the present season, and the Panama Rail-Road Company has made arrangements to afford every facility which may be required for the accomplishment of this important object. A Pierr, 450 feet long, has been built in the bay of Panama, to the end of which Freight Cars are run to receive cargoes from lighters or vessel lying alongside, and deliver the same afongside of vessels. Asplayall. Vessels of from 200 to 300 tons can lie at the Pier with safety, grounding in the mud at low water.

The vessels to and from Aspinwall are fast-sailing brigs, he longing to the Bail-Road Company, and the Company is prepared to receive oil at Panama and deliver it in New York, under through Bills of Lading at the rate of seven cents per gallon, if received at the Pier, and eight cents per gallon if received in the harbor from ship's tackles, charging for the capacity of the casks, without allowing for wantage. For whalebone, one and one-half cents per pound. This charge covers every expense from Panama to New York, in case the cil is sent through the Superintendent or Commercial Agent of the Panama Rail-Road Company, a urance excepted. The freights may be made payable on the 18thmus or in New York at the option of the Pana
